

Neil Heffernan, Polyseam*

Polyseam appoints Neil Heffernan as Product Certification Manger to drive its full product testing and certification programme

Polyseam, a leading developer and manufacturer of sealants and adhesives has appointed Neil Heffernan to the new role of Product Certification Manager. With the July 1st deadline for mandatory CE marking of sealants rapidly approaching, this appointment will help Polyseam to lead the way with its comprehensive testing and certification programme.

Dave Oram, from Polyseam, said; "Neil brings with him extensive knowledge and understanding of the certification and testing procedures. We have an ever expanding range of products and we want our customers to be confident that they are buying the best product for the job and one that meets all the necessary criteria." One of Neil's first projects will be to obtain full CE certification for the recently launched Graft™ range.

"Joining Polyseam gives me a real opportunity to apply my knowledge of testing and certification in a wider commercial market. There is a real drive for improving standards of safety and security across the industry and I'm delighted to be able to help Polyseam take the initiative and position itself as a dynamic organisation that recognises the importance of European legislation, which includes CE marking," said Neil.

In addition to working with the company's manufacturing team in Huddersfield, Neil will also spend some of his time at the company's purpose built fire test facility in Norway. Prior to joining Polyseam, Neil spent eight years as a senior technical officer at BM Trada (formerly Chiltern International Fire).

Background

Based in Huddersfield, Polyseam has been developing and manufacturing sealants and adhesives for the own brand market for 20 years and employs over 30 people. Last year the company introduced a number of new products based around its highly successful ITP technology.

In addition the company is known for Protecta Passive Fire Protection product range, which includes sealants, collars, wraps, and boards that help to ensure that both new builds and refurbished properties meet the latest requirements for air, sound and fire insulation. The company is also active in the Northern European market where its passive fire protection products are the market leaders.
